SECTION C : READING ZONE

The lighthouse stood at the edge of the silent coast, its beam sweeping across the restless sea at measured intervals. For years, it had guided countless ships safely to shore, though few paused to consider the quiet vigilance behind its steady glow. On stormy nights, when waves rose like towering walls and winds howled without mercy, the light did not falter. It neither hurried nor hesitated—it simply remained constant. Strangely, it was during calm nights, when the sea appeared harmless and still, that its presence seemed almost forgotten. Yet, it was precisely this unchanging duty, whether noticed or ignored, that defined its true worth.

Q1.Which of the following best captures the deeper idea of the passage?
(a) Lighthouses are important during storms
(b) Work done quietly and consistently holds great value
(c) The sea is dangerous at all times
(d) People should admire lighthouses more

Q2.Why is the lighthouse described as "not hurrying or hesitating"?
(a) It cannot move physically
(b) It follows a fixed, dependable pattern
(c) It is controlled by machines
(d) It works only during storms

Q3.What contrast is implied between stormy nights and calm nights?
(a) The lighthouse works only during storms
(b) The sea is safer during storms than calm nights
(c) The lighthouse is valued more in danger than in safety
(d) The lighthouse shines brighter in calm weather
