SECTION C : READING ZONE

There was something peculiar about the way the old man tended his garden. While others hurried through their chores, he moved with deliberate patience, pausing often—not out of weariness, but as if listening to something beyond sound. The plants, under his care, did not merely grow; they seemed to thrive with a quiet dignity. Visitors often attributed this to his experience, but those who observed closely sensed that it was neither skill nor routine alone. It was an unspoken understanding—an attentiveness that blurred the line between effort and instinct. Curiously, the old man never claimed credit for his flourishing garden. "I only give them time," he would say, though it was evident that what he offered went beyond hours measured by the clock.

Q1.What is the most subtle implication about the old man's gardening?
(a) It is based purely on scientific methods
(b) It involves a deeper sensitivity and connection
(c) It depends mainly on experience
d) It requires very little effort

Q2.Why does the author say the plants grew with "quiet dignity"?
(a) They were rare species
(b) They grew without any care
(c) They reflected the old man's thoughtful approach
(d) They were admired by visitors

Q3.What does the phrase "blurred the line between effort and instinct" suggest?
(a) The old man worked without thinking
(b) His actions had become naturally intuitive
(c) He avoided hard work
(d) He relied only on guesswork

Q4.What is the tone of the passage?
(a) critical
(b) reflective
(c) humorous
(d) suspenseful

Q5.What does the old man's statement "I only give them time" truly imply?
(a) He spends little time in the garden
(b) Time alone is sufficient for growth
(c) Care and attention are more important than effort
(d) He does not value his work

Passage 2 (Factual / Analytical)

In an age defined by speed, efficiency is often mistaken for effectiveness. Completing tasks quickly is frequently celebrated, while the quality of outcomes receives less attention. However, studies in cognitive performance suggest that rapid execution, when not balanced with reflection, can lead to repeated errors and superficial understanding.Interestingly, individuals who deliberately slow down at critical stages—planning, reviewing, and evaluating—tend to produce results that are both accurate and sustainable. This does not imply that speed is undesirable, but rather that its value is conditional. True efficiency lies not in how fast something is done, but in how well it endures scrutiny over time.

Q6.What is the central argument of the passage?
(a) Speed is harmful in all situations
(b) Efficiency should replace effectiveness
(c) Speed must be balanced with thoughtful execution
(d) Slow work is always better than fast work

Q7.What does the phrase "endures scrutiny" most nearly mean?
(a) avoids attention
(b) passes careful examination
(c) gains popularity
(d) requires no effort

Q8.Which of the following is implied but not directly stated?
(a) Fast workers always fail
(b) Reflection improves quality of work
(c) Speed should be completely avoided
(d) Planning wastes time

Q9.What is the tone of the passage?
(a) argumentative
(b) analytical
(c) emotional
(d) sarcastic

Q10.Which statement best reflects the author's viewpoint?
(a) Quick results are always reliable
(b) Effectiveness is independent of speed
(c) Thoughtful work leads to better long-term outcomes
(d) Accuracy and speed cannot coexist
